The Chest X-Ray Unit Returns to Lemon Grove Saturday

Many More to be Included in Survey Here

The Mass Chest X-Ray unit will return to Lemon Grove Saturday.

The unit will be stationed at the same location as before, the Lindley Drug Store corner, Main and Broadway, during the hours from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

So many Lemon Grove people took advantage of the X-Ray during the two-day stay here January 13 and 14, that it was thought that by returning for another day this community could be made practically 100%.

Lemon Grove was near the top in the number of adults X-rayed, 1211 of them passing through the unit in two days, outdistancing several of our nearby neighboring communities.

Rev. Morris Mulkey, chairman of the local committee, urges all adults who failed to take the X-Ray to do so Saturday as the units are nearing the end of their San Diego visits, and will move on to other parts of the state.

Banker Sees Prosperity Ahead

"The failure of recent economic adjustments to seriously affect business in general appears to justify our confidence that current prosperity may continue more or less unabated for several years."

This view was expressed in San Diego by F. J. Belcher Jr., president and chairman of the board, First National Trust and Savings Bank, in his annual report to shareholders. "Present levels of production and consumer demand are not above normal if viewed in the perspective of long-term economic growth," Belcher said in the institution's sixty-sixth annual report.

Old Timer Amazed at L. G. Growth

C. M. Applescill, who owned 10 acres at the corner of Washington and Golden 25 years ago, returned to Lemon Grove last week for a short visit.

He called on A. F. Sonka and what few other oldtimers he could find, and told them that he had a hard time finding his way around Lemon Grove. That it was not what it used to be.

He said he never expected to find a city such as this when he came back to the old home town. He was dumbfounded at the growth of the community.

He has spent most of the past 25 years at Los Angeles. He was once sheriff of Imperial county.

Fire District Bond Issue Needs Help

The Lemon Grove Fire Commissioners are busy men these days preparing for the forthcoming bond issue election, at which time the people of the Lemon Grove Fire Protection District will be asked to approve the issuance of bonds for the purchase of a fire truck and the building of a fire station.

Maintenance of the district will be paid out of the yearly tax levy. The commissioners plan the purchase of a 500 gallon pumper truck, and the fire fighters will not be dependent upon the water pressure in the mains.

Hydrants are now already advantageously located so that the big truck can be quickly filled with water without traveling any great distance.

April is not far off. It is time now for local organizations to begin to study the program of the fire commissioners and to get behind them to put the election over if they want fire protection for Lemon Grove.

The commissioners are Channing Mason, of the Mason Feed and Supply, H 6-5128; Virgil E. Dues, 1732 Englewood drive, and Al Anderson, 7965 Lincoln.

Hundreds of citizens of Lemon Grove community have evidenced their desire for a local newspaper by subscribing to the Review. New subscriptions are coming in every week but there still are many homes without the Review. Subscriber friends would do us a real kindness if they would share their paper with a neighbor who does not get the paper and ask them to subscribe for the Review.

Everyone knows that a newspaper cannot exist on subscriptions alone. The main source of income is from advertising. The Review has a larger coverage of the local area than any other paper and could and should be a medium for interesting all Lemon Grove residents to buy at home.

In the short regime of the present owners (a little over six months) they feel that they have established the fact that they are here to help build Lemon Grove. Publicity is freely given to every organization and its activities, any events touching the growth and welfare of the community, to personal and social items.

The editors hope to add more departments of interest as the finances of the Review warrant. The future of the Review rests with those for whom it is here to serve.

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT
JAMES DORAIS

Special "weeks" and "days" commemorating this trivium or that may be somewhat overdone but most Americans will agree that Boy Scout Week, to be celebrated February 6 to 12, is a week of another color.

This year, Boy Scout Week takes on added significance, for it marks the 40th anniversary of the establishment of Scouting in America. The Scout movement, in the past four decades, has grown steadily to the point where today there are nearly 2 million registered Scouts.

Scouting has become so much a part of the typical American boy's life that most adults are probably inclined to take it pretty much for granted. At first hearing, the Scout theme during this anniversary year, "Strengthen the Arm of Liberty," may even sound somewhat pretentious.

Yet this is exactly what the Scout program does. The proof lies in the fact that in countries where individual liberties are suppressed, the Scout movement is suppressed too.

The Boy Scout organization was outlawed in Russia when the Bolsheviks came to power and replaced by the State-controlled Pioneer Youth Group. Mussolini abolished the Boy Scouts in Italy. Hitler did the same in Germany. During the war, Scouting went underground when France and the Low Countries were invaded.

Today, in the Soviet satellite countries of Eastern Europe, Scouting is being liquidated again. Polish Scouts now must belong to the Communist Polish Youth Association. The Hungarian Boy Scout organization recently withdrew from international scouting, with a blast that it represents "big capital and imperialistic forces." Scouting has been banned in Czechoslovakia.

A recent article in the Russian newspaper Soviet Sport reveals a pathological fear of Scouting that makes hilarious reading to Americans. According to the article, the Scout movement is "an imperialistic device to train bourgeois spies and espionage agents, poisoned with imperialistic ideals."

In America, the article declared, Scouts are used as strike-breakers, "particularly during schoolteachers' strikes." And, it is charged, "in games which train soldier aggressors, dangerous, unrestrained rough practices are encouraged, acts of violence in the nature of physical reprisals are tolerated."

Finally, the Russian paper flatly charged that a basic requirement for Scouts is a belief in God. That, of course, is true. It is also true that Scouting teaches the principles of trustworthiness, loyalty, duty, courtesy, obedience to law and bravery.

Scouting's insistence on those principles indeed "strengthens the arm of liberty." At a time when the light of liberty has been extinguished in large sections of the world, Boy Scout Week is well worth celebrating.

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

Rather like a fickle beauty of song and dance, the lady luck of California's political world has spent the past few months perched first on the laps of Republican suitors, then Democratic, then Republican and back to Democratic. It's hard to tell just where the lady will decide to light, ultimately, but just now she's making eyes at the GOP again.

For the present, the ranks of California Republicans present a semblance of unity and it's quite possible that the different GOP factions will stay in step from now until election.

Not so the Democratic squads. Rumbling and grumbling, they're watching would-be Governor Jimmy Roosevelt strut his stuff at the head of the column—and in many cases wishing some one would challenge his position. Rather than march with the bourgeois, Lady Luck seems to have left them to puzzle along as best they can.

Wellburn Mayock, Southern California Democrat, and the man who in the dark, pre-November 1948 days, (Democrat speaking), organized Truman-Barkley Clubs throughout the State, has offered opposition to "interloper" Roosevelt's claim to the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Mayock, according to the political underground, is the favorite of the Truman Administration to upset Jimmy Roosevelt's apple-cart. At least, it is said, he's the Administration man until (or unless) a "name" candidate can be found, all public statements to the contrary.

In fact, recent guests at the White House state that the Administration is decidedly unhappy about Roosevelt and will go all out against him.

Substantiation for the theory that the Administration is not reconciled to the Roosevelt candidacy, and will back Mayock instead, rests in the claim that Ed Pauley, millionaire California oilman and Democratic bigwig is raising money for the Mayock campaign. Mayock, the story continues, formerly did a bit of lobbying in Washington for Pauley in connection with California's battle to retain title to her tidelands.

If the Administration can swing sufficient weight in California political circles to put local party machinery behind Mayock, his candidacy for gubernatorial honors won't be able to be dismissed too lightly by the Roosevelt forces. Properly financed and with strong Democratic organization support, Mr. Mayock could prove quite a stumbling block to Jimmy Roosevelt—and to any political future he may have carved out for himself.

All this, however, is but an example of lady luck in politics. A few weeks ago, not too many people took candidate Mayock seriously and quite a few politicians were of the opinion that California's GOP was hopeless divided.

Words of Wisdom

Dr. Tully C. Knoles, Stockton, Chancellor, College of Pacific—"No democracy can have a settled explicit foreign policy."

John H. Legend, South Gate businessman—"High taxes are killing this country—and the time has come to get information on taxes to the voters."

Oliver Huston, prominent clubwoman in S. F., on equal rights for women—"We're all in favor of equal rights for men."

Dr. A. W. Sampson, Berkeley, U. C. Prof.—"We've talked conservation for years, but the brutal truth is that we have barely started up its steep trail."

Talks and Walks With Mother Nature

BY TRIXIE TREGANZA

CALIFORNIA PRODUCTS

To say that California products lead the world is not bragging. The cause, however, is attributable to a very definite reason. No other State in the Union claims the services of more efficient and dependable help in raising of her products than does California. Do you ask, who is this army of experts? Why it is the birds—California's wonderful variety of birds—one of her greatest natural resources, that earns more wealth and prosperity for the State than any other factor of our civilization today. We hear so much about budget systems lately—household government and commercial institutions must all be regulated according to budget systems. This is no new idea. Nature has always had a perfect budget system. The birds do nature's housekeeping; for there are birds that sweep the air, there are birds that glean the fields, that comb the beaches, that pick along the shores, that police the streams and there are birds that guard the trees of forest and orchard. The Creator has fitted each species with beak and foot and wing to enable it to perform a specific duty and that duty is to keep in abeyance a devouring multitude of insect and rodent pests.

Watch the farmer some lovely Spring day as his plow share turns up the new earth revealing insect eggs and beetles to the eye of a corp of white-winged gulls. Noisily and greedily they follow close upon his heels quarreling over the choice morsels of slumbering life that would waken to the warm summer sunshine to come forth a devouring host. Gulls have no choice of food. Anything is good enough for them, dead or alive. They are the original "White-wings." They are scavengers that keep polluting refuse from spreading disease germs. They are the birds who helped the pioneers lay the foundation of prosperity by reclaiming an arid desolate country.

As our beautiful Western Meadow-lark sits upon a fence post and tells you that "Lemon Grove is a pretty little place," you do not know that his day's menu was composed of alfalfa weevils, caterpillars, ground beetles and grasshoppers. His squeaky voiced cousins, the Yellow-headed and Red-winged Blackbirds, choose a diet seven-eighths of which is insects injurious to agriculture. From the sage brush thickets comes a flood of delicious melody, and there atop a bush sits a solitary sage Thrasher pouring out his love to his brooding mate. For his dinner he has eaten ants, spiders, caterpillars and beetles; just how many, no one can know, because a bird is so highly organized, its blood pressure so high and its pulse so rapid that the process of digestion lasts from 10 minutes to half an hour. So the stomach content of a bird would reveal only the food of the previous half hour. Perhaps no bird works harder to keep down his insect army than our beloved song sparrow. All day long he sings just home melodies that touch the heart as back and forth he goes, when the nest is full of hungry babies to be fed, 200 or more trips a day with such food as cut-worms, army worms, destructive moths and butterflies.

How often when driving down a lonely country road has the sighing coo of the lonely Mourning Dove come out to you as you passed a willow thicket. Had you ever wondered whether this bird of the way-side figured in the economy of human life. Ask any tiller of the soil, any gardener if weeds are not the bane of his very existence? Ask him how many hours of each season he must spend to keep this parasite from crowding out his profitable crop? How many paid assistants must he employ each year? Does he receive no help gratis and unsolicited? Yes, indeed, in the stomach of a single Mourning Dove 9200 weed seeds were counted. Chickadees, Kinglets, Warblers, Woodpeckers, Robins, Wrens and Bluebirds are the policemen who guard the forest and orchard. Captain of the squad is the cheery, vivacious Chickadee who in one day will eat 5500 eggs of the cankerworm. In the 25 days that it takes the cankerworm moth to crawl up the tree it will have destroyed 138,750 eggs. What more could one tiny creature do to prove its economic value? Even our cheery Robin will eat its own weight of insect food daily, and a family of bluejays will destroy one million caterpillars in a season.

At the close of each day when weary husbandman turn their steps homeward, when the tollers of the air seek their sheltered perch for the night, there are yet the hours of twilight and dawn whose fading light attracts a myriad of insects and moths that continue the ceaseless war of ravage and destruction. Man's work for the day is done. Who is there, then, to guard his right. Have you ever seen the Night Hawk with its wide, gaping mouth, wheeling about on graceful wing as it sweeps the evening sky? Moths, flies, grasshoppers, crickets, the malaria carrying mosquito, the notorious Colorado potato beetle, June bugs, dung beetles, bark-beetles, and squash beetles, all fall an easy prey to his dexterous flight.

There are other birds that hunt at dawn and twilight whose menu is not so varied. Like an arrow they drop upon their quarry, the rodents, the burrowing pests that aim their destruction at the very roots of the growing grain are favored food of Hawks, Falcons and Owls. When the nest is filled with ravenously hungry, growing babies that need to be fed many, many times a day, then these foes to successful agriculture are sought out with diligence. When night enshrouds the earth and man complacently enjoys the warmth of the glowing hearth as he peruses the evening news, he is satisfied. Night to him is rest and peace and quiet. Only daylight means activity.

But the immutable forces of Nature move on by day as well as night. Her agents of destruction never cease. A solitary hoo, hoo announces the policeman of the night as they take up the work where the day shift left off. How quickly they arrest the furry offenders and immediately subject them to capital punishment. A pair of Owls will bring a mouse to the nest every 10 or 15 minutes and in 16 months they will deposit a bushel of pellets upon the ground. Owls swallow their food whole, only the nutritious parts are digested. Fur, bone and feathers are rolled into little balls by a digestive process and ejected, so that the investigator can tell exactly what feed these birds eat by examining these pellets.

We could go on and on, stating specifically the exact economic value of each specie of California birds. The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture has computed that the loss to agriculture in the U. S. annually is one billion dollars which means one dollar a month for every man, woman and child. There are no less than 2 million insects, only 400,000 of which have been named and classified. When insects reproduce it is by tens of thousands. Against this foe man is entirely powerless to

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

USE THAWED FRUIT AT ONCE

Fruits from your home freezer have the best flavor and color if they are served just before they are completely defrosted, according to a recent recommendation by Home Advisor Bena Johnson. She suggests thawing the fruit in the sealed container to help prevent change of color.

There are three ways to thaw one-pound packages of fruit, depending on how soon it will be served. It will take six to eight hours to thaw in the refrigerator, or one to three hours at room temperature. For faster thawing, place the sealed package in a pan of cold water for one-half to one hour.

Do not thaw more fruit than you plan to use at one time, Miss Johnson says. If you have to hold fruit after thawing, simmer it for a few minutes and chill before storing. This will help keep the fresh color and flavor.

In an emergency, frozen food may be held for two to three days in the refrigerator, but it must be watched for signs of spoilage. Throw away any thawed fruit that looks off-color, has a peculiar odor, or is slimy. Do not taste it.

Complete instructions for preparing, storing, thawing and cooking frozen foods have been compiled into a handy leaflet by the University of California Agricultural Extension Service. Copies are available without charge at the local office, Room 404, U. S. Custom Building, San Diego.

EASY TESTS FOR MILK AND CREAM

Anyone can test milk or cream successfully, whether or not he is trained in laboratory work. Farm Advisor, F. W. Dorman, says it takes practice, but the results can be dependable.

Dorman reports he has just received a new bulletin outlining some simple and easy tests for quality in milk and cream, such as the Babcock test for determining fat, and Mann's acidity test. Included are complete instructions on how to use the lactometer to determine the specific gravity and percentage of solids-not-fat in milk, and how to use the commercial sediment testers.

Dorman says the success of any milk test depends on clean equipment, a typical example, and following the directions in detail. The bulletin explains and illustrates these directions in a manner that is easy to follow. Copies are available without charge at the local Agricultural Extension Service Office. Call or write, Room 404, U. S. Custom Building, M. 3811, Ex. 255 and ask for "Testing Milk and Cream."

AVOCADO FERTILIZATION

The standard fertilization practice of many avocado growers is an annual application of 150 to 200 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre in the form of commercial fertilizers, says J. J. Cooney of the Agricultural Extension Service in San Diego County. This yearly amount is divided into two to four applications—three being most common. One-third to one-half the yearly supply is supplied in late January or in February, the remainder being applied after fruit set, and again in early fall.

Indications are that such a program adequately takes care of avocados on most soils. These avocados are like many tree crops in that they have no difficulty in making the most of the available mineral elements in the soil. They seem to get by very well, maintaining vigor and production, in spite of the fact that routine soil analysis may show low "available" amounts of certain nutrient mineral elements.

What enables the avocado to be so thrifty? One reason is that tree crops in general in contrast to many other crops do not have a high requirement for elements at any one time. Their take-up of elements is at a lower, more uniform rate. Too, subtropicals have virtually year-round activity, which means more time for that extensive root system to efficiently mine the soil. The larger leaf surface of the tree is an indirect help, in that the food manufactured in the leaves is stored in twigs and branches for use at a later, more critical time, i.e. during blossoming and fruit setting.

The one element that tree crops do become efficient in is nitrogen, and unless some nitrogen is added periodically, growth and production is limited.

In using commercial fertilizers consideration should be given to evaluating prices per ton in view of the actual nitrogen content. It doesn't seem to make much difference to the tree what the source of nitrogen is.

While young trees may not actually show a need for fertilizer, some certainly appear to help, especially on most hillside soils.

The amount is small, but from one to several ounces right around the tree applied several times a year will keep green and moving along.

So it isn't hard for a grower to arrive at a decision as to "what, when, and how much" fertilizer to apply. He should then spend more time on the subjects of irrigation and any other practices that affect soil conditions. They can all have some effect on root activity, production is not solely in the fertilizer program or in any other one single operation by itself. All phases of soil management and tree care are involved in the ultimate success of the enterprise.

BROODING BABY CHICKS TO BE DISCUSSED

Poultrymen are invited to attend meetings on the subject of Brooding Baby Chicks, with special emphasis on winter brooding methods, at Agricultural Extension Service meetings according to Robert Adolph, Farm Advisor in poultry for San Diego County.

Adolph points out that brooding during winter and early spring months requires special attention. Proper brooding of chicks pays dividends in better egg production and fast growing fryers. Although brooding in winter and early spring is more difficult, poultrymen have found that these chicks are the ones which produce the largest number of eggs during the season's high fall egg prices.

Brooding equipment and slides on poultry brooding and rearing equipment used by San Diego county poultrymen will be demonstrated at these meetings.

This series of meetings is held as a part of the regular Agricultural Extension Service program of work in the field of poultry production in San Diego County in co-operation with the Farm Bureau Poultry Department.

The series of five meetings open to the public is scheduled as follows: Carlsbad—Monday, January 30, 7:30 p.m.; Carlsbad—Tuesday, January 31, 7:30 p.m.; Escondido—High School library; Fallbrook—Wednesday, February 1, 7:30 p.m.; Homestead Room, Fallbrook High School; Grossmont—Thursday, February 2, 7:30 p.m.; Grossmont Union High School; Ramona—Friday, February 3, 7:30 p.m.; Ramona High School.

WILT AND WATER MELONS

Very few watermelon varieties are well adapted to California, warns Farm Advisor, Bernarr J. Hall, University of California Agricultural Extension Service. Only varieties that are resistant to Fusarium wilt should be planted on land that has been planted to watermelon before.

Blue Ribbon and Klondike R7 are wilt resistant varieties that have been developed for California growing conditions. The fruit of these two varieties weigh 18 to 25 pounds and are of excellent quality. They are suitable for shipping, local market or home garden purposes. They may be planted on new land or on soil which has been planted to watermelons before.

Klondike and Striped Klondike are also used in California, but are susceptible to wilt. Hall adds, Several strains are available, the black seeded No. 3 being the most popular. Kleckley Sweet and Tom Watson are varieties planted occasionally. These four varieties are safe to plant on new land, but a second crop should not be grown for 12 years. Hall says if the soil is badly infested with wilt, even 12 years may not be long enough before growing another crop.

Walks and Talks With Mother Nature cope without the assistance of the birds. Each new encroachment of civilization reveals new and unheard of insect pests which only the birds can hold in check. Why do we not hear more about this service rendered gratuitously? It is because these helpers never clamor for recognition, never demand a share of the profits, never ask for a single day's vacation. There is a silent service rendered 365 days of the year both day and night, and all they ask of man is just that they might live, that they might be protected against ignorant destruction. Let us encourage and attract our birds by every possible means. California is a virgin state; her wonderful resources have not yet been touched. Let us conserve the wealth of our state and guard every resource that will make California the greatest State in the Union.

Mrs. Ellison to Go to Cincinnati

After spending 23 pleasant years in San Diego County, Mrs. Marge Ellison, local real estate broker, has decided to return to her former home in Cincinnati, Ohio and again establish residence there. She will start her journey by auto on St. Valentine's Day.

Marge can't say she's going "back home," because over half her life has been spent out West, which makes her a Californian, although not exactly a native of our Golden State. Business and property interests will necessitate her return here from time to time and at present Mrs. Ellison is making plans to join the cavalcade of horsemen and riders next October from San Diego and all over the State to the annual horsemen's convention at Palm Springs. She is keeping her memberships in the various riding clubs and horsemen's associations here in California and intends to keep in touch with her local friends.

For the past six months, Marge wrote a column, "Ridin' By," for the Review. She covered horsemen's news of this part of the County in a concise but most interesting manner. As one former horseman said, "She makes me wish I was ridin' my horse again."

She promises to keep us informed of any events of particular interest in the equestrian field that might take place back in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, as she plans to continue her interest and activities in horse-back riding and trails in her new location. Her many friends wish her happiness and the best of luck in her new plans.

Winners of Chest X-Ray Essay Contest Given

Heights School by W. A. Thomas, principal.

FIRST PRIZE

TOM MCCABE, GRADE 8

We should all have a chest X-ray if we are 15 or older because it helps stamp out the dreaded disease—tuberculosis. X-ray is something every person can and should take advantage of for there is no fee charged the individual and if you cannot conveniently reach the appointed location of the unit, transportation is furnished. People do not have to hold back from a sense of false modesty or embarrassment for it is not necessary to remove their clothing, with the exception of sweaters or heavy coats, and articles, such as pencils pens or any "pin-on" objects.

The result of the X-ray is kept in strictest confidence, a copy of which is sent to the individual to be given if necessary to his doctor.

Many people are fearful of having chest X-rays because it shows up other diseases and they do not want to know about them, but this is every one's duty, for regular yearly X-rays will discover disease in their early stages when they can be cured.

The mobile unit, when it comes to the community, is staffed with experienced people who take you through the examination very quickly by first taking your name and address, removing excess clothing and metal objects from pockets or clothes, and properly places you before the X-ray machine. After the film has been taken it is developed and examined by experienced doctors who can tell whether you are in the early stages of heart or lung disease.

The Mass Chest X-ray is a community and in the nation helps stamp out disease if every one has it done, by finding out those people having a disease and curing them so that they will not give it to others.

At your private doctor the same X-ray would cost you 15 or 20 dollars; therefore everyone should take advantage of the Mass Chest X-ray.

SECOND PRIZE

RUTH FINNERTY

I think everyone should take advantage of having an X-ray because it may save the lives of many people.

A person sometimes has the germ but it does not develop and yet, this person might give it to someone else and they get tuberculosis. The mass chest X-ray is to prevent millions of people from dying yearly.

Statistics show that in 1900, tuberculosis was the most feared disease because the death rate was 292 per 100,000 of the population. Now the death rate is 65 per 100,000. We can make it even less if everyone gets a chest X-ray because today there is a cure for it if you can catch it in time. You might save your life and many others if you get a chest X-ray. So today don't delay, get a chest X-ray and protect your life.

There are some people who have tuberculosis, cancer, and heart trouble that think they do not have them. If you take this X-ray you know for sure if you have these diseases or not. If you do you can be protected by being sent to a sanitarium. You can also protect other people too. The X-ray is free because Christmas seals and taxes pay for it. It is very easy to take this X-ray. Why keep putting it off and endanger your life and some one else's too? There are also X-ray trucks in San Diego where you can get your X-ray. People have worked hard to prevent these diseases to make it possible for you to be healthy.

If you keep putting this X-ray off and you do have one of these diseases it may be too late for doctors to cure you. There are many people in the sanitarium now that have been there for months and some of them for years. They didn't have the chance you do to see if they get these diseases or not. So get your X-ray now or you may be with those people in the sanitarium that can't walk around or do many things that you can do.

Let's make San Diego County a perfect record. Let's have everybody be able to say "I've been X-rayed."

This question (Why mass chest X-ray?) has been asked all over our country. Some people may not think they have tuberculosis, but how can they be sure?

Tuberculosis like other infectious disease spreads from person to person. Have an X-ray about once a year to make sure you have not caught it.

This X-ray does not just check on tuberculosis, but on heart trouble, cancer and many others. The chest X-ray is very easy to have and costs nothing. The chest X-ray vans are moving all over San Diego County so that every one may have a chance. If you find out you have tuberculosis, you can take a cure and prevent others from getting it too. Be sure! Have one today.

Tuberculosis is a serious disease of the lungs detected by X-ray.

Doctors worked hard to find the cause of this terrible disease. They found that it was spread from person to person by germs coughed from the lungs. They also found that it was spread by breathing dust with T.B. germs in it. The best treatment for it is good food, fresh air, and a warm dry climate.

Even though doctors are working hard to prevent the spread, the disease is still spreading. It is spreading because so many people have it and don't know it. To help prevent this, San Diego County Medical Society and the San Diego City and County Tuberculosis and Health Association sent out 19 mobile X-ray units to visit different parts of San Diego and County. Machines were also set up in the main department stores and the banks. Skilled technicians, X-ray people, are stationed on the sidewalks in front of the trucks and on the different floors of the buildings to ask people if they have had their chest X-rayed. The reports on the X-rays are sent out to the people within two or three weeks.

All during the month of December and part of the month of January, I have read in the newspaper and have heard over the mass X-ray being conducted in San Diego.

Stations have been set up throughout the city where any one 15 years or more can have a free X-ray of their lungs to see whether or not they have tuberculosis commonly called T.B.

I looked up T.B. in the encyclopedia and found that T.B. is an infectious disease that is passed from person to person by inhalation of air contracted from consuming milk or other products of tubercular cows.

It used to be thought that it was handed from parent to child and that it was incurable, but now we know it is never inherited, and that it is frequently cured.

In addition to the human race, cows and pigs get T.B. most frequently. Horses and cats get it most infrequently, and dogs, sheep and goats are immune to infection.

Many people are not aware of its onset until the disease is well established in the lungs. By the time the patient observes even slight symptoms, the disease may have progressed to the point of lung tissue destruction.

Modern methods discover the disease before the patient could possibly suspect it. X-rays of the chest, where the test shows positive, discover large number of cases.

In 1942 T.B. cost the lives of about 57,000 persons in the United States alone.

Now we can see the importance of the mass X-ray. These X-rays of the lungs will show whether or not people have T.B. while it is still curable and will prevent those people who have it from spreading it to others.

Banker Sees Prosperity Ahead

financial executive warned: "This is not to imply that business and industry have solved all their problems, or that political manipulations of the nation's monetary system will not extract a toll from both the consumer and the investor."

"Rather," he continued, "it represents a belief by management that a free economy will develop both the production facilities and the consumer market to insure a high level of business activity."

The report continued: It now is evident that business and industry faced three major problems during 1949, and great strides were made toward solution. This has provided a reasonably sound basis for an expanding economy in 1950:

1. Consumer confidence in a new price level was re-established after the cost-of-living index receded slightly from the post-war high of 1948;

2. Management, in every line of business and industry, took constructive and often drastic action to eliminate waste and restore a high degree of operating efficiency;

3. Many lines of trade weathered, without serious effects, the long expected adjustments that were inevitable as the backlog of orders from previous years was exhausted and normal competitive conditions returned to the market.

"These developments had the greatest impact on general business profits which were down an estimated 22.5 percent from the 1948 high," Belcher reported. "Conversely, the volume of goods received by consumers held relatively steady because of a lower price level."

Belcher said "the continued growth, economic stability and high level of business activity evident throughout most of 1949 are reflected in the operations of the First National Trust and Savings Bank."

"Because of the fundamental nature of banking," he added, "we are concerned with conditions which prevail in other lines of business. It is for this reason that our 1949 annual report is presented against a background of nationwide economic trends and San Diego County business conditions."

Reviewing these trends, he reported "The nation's economy during the year just passed was dominated by consumer resistance to the high post-war price level, but business improved as this condition was corrected. It is significant that this was the first 12-month period since the war when the net movement of prices in general has been toward a lower instead of a higher level."

"However, it must be noted that an undercurrent was moving in the opposite direction. The finance, commerce and industry continued upward and this trend has not been checked. It is this condition which is responsible for current fears of renewed inflation—fears that to some extent appear to be justified."

"A far greater public appreciation for sound government fiscal policies is urgent if conditions necessary to long-term economic stability are to be achieved. The pages of history are cluttered with the failures of nations whose leaders believed that inflation was an easy solution to basic economic problems."

Belcher said that in the face of such conflicting trends, the First National Bank "continues to adhere to its established policy of constructive service to our community. One of our greatest assets is the faith and confidence of our depositors. This can best be maintained, we feel, by conservative lending policies and loan and investment procedures which assure sound financial operations."

In addition to his comment on national economic trends, Belcher included a detailed report on San Diego business conditions in the First National's annual statement. He said the 24-page report, largest ever published by a locally owned San Diego bank, will be sent to financial institutions in all parts of the nation.
